COURAGE THAT WON

—By Frank H. Sweet

Copyright, 1904, by Frank H. Sweet

Judge Paula went down the office steps briskly, his face, which a few moments before had been creased into a frown, now beaming with the satisfaction of duty well done. He had forbidden the new doctor, who had no prospects and no faculty for money making, to visit his house any more. From what he knew of Edith and what he had seen in the young doctor's eyes he felt that he need apprehend no further trouble, and the affair had not gone far enough for either of the young people to suffer any heartache.

Dr. Phil was standing in front of an open window in his office, his hands thrust deep into his pockets, gazing out at the judge as he crossed the street and passed on through the field opposite toward the river, probably to see if the swollen torrent was doing any damage to his lands. Then, with the same strong self-contained look which the judge had seen and against his will, admired, the young doctor turned back into his office.

There was no despondency in his clear gray eyes, no weakening of his square chin. He had fought his way from almost absolute ignorance at twelve in the depths of a coal mine through various situations to one school after another, through college and medical school and hospital practice, until now he was here in an office of his own waiting for the first patient.

There was a large back region of farm and mountain people here, and once he could gain their confidence it would offer him such a field as he loved, a life of hard, continuous work, with much of it in long journeys under the open sky. The horror of his early boyhood in the black depths of the mine could never leave him; to be in the open air was to be in God's own world. The matter of recompense in money never troubled him.

As he turned from the window a man came hurrying across a field from the direction of the river. Reaching the opposite fence, he vaulted over without seeking the gate and ran straight to Dr. Phil's office.

"Hello, doctor!" he called sharply. "You got a telephone?"

"Yes."

"Well, you call down to Dr. Peters at the Ferry road and tell him to hurry to Dan Sims' house, on Foster side the river—tell him Lonesome valley. Dan jest hollered across to me an' said his wife cut herself with an axe, but an' they was holdin' back the bleedin' well's they could. The bridge is down to the Ferry road."

"But it's nearly twenty miles to the Ferry bridge. It will take Dr. Peters hours to reach her."

"Can't help that. No man could get across the river this side the bridge, an' Dr. Peters is the nearest. You'd have to go forty miles."

"There's the branch that runs into the river from the mountains," he called over his shoulder. "After this freshest it must be a torrent, as dangerous as the river itself. Dr. Peters could never cross it. He is too old."

The man's countenance fell. "That's so," he admitted. "I'd forgot all about the branch. I s'pose it's jest tearin' now. Well, I'll holler back to Dan an' tell him a doctor'll be over jest as soon's the water goes down a little an' that they must do the best they can."

"You'll do nothing of the sort. Hurry round to the stable behind the office and bring my horse. You'll find the bridge hanging on a peg. Never mind a saddle; that will be too much weight."

"But why?"

"Hurry, I tell you!" thundered Dr. Phil. "The woman may be bleeding to death. I'll be ready by the time you are back."

When the man appeared Dr. Phil was at the corner of the office, and he threw himself instantly upon the horse's back.

"You can't go!" the man tried to say, but Dr. Phil did not hear him. He was tearing across the street, and when they came to the fence the horse took it at a bound. A few minutes later they were at the river.

Several men were working in the edge of the water, trying to rescue lumber and other floating wreckage from the torrent. Judge Paula was standing on the bank watching them. As the horse dashed down the bank the men threw up their hands warningly.

"You can't cross here!" one of them yelled. "It's sure death!"

"A woman's on the other side dying," was Dr. Phil's only answer.

He did not even attempt to check the horse, but plunged into the water at full speed.

This horse was the only piece of property that Dr. Phil owned, and he had been able to make the purchase because the ugliness and viciousness and small size of the animal had made the price very low. But the horse was apparently afraid of nothing in the world and had strong staying powers, and these were qualities which soon convinced the young doctor that he had obtained the very animal he needed without regard to price.

However, with that rushing, roaring torrent before him, the animal seemed to think it foolhardy to proceed, for before he had gone a dozen feet from shore he tried to turn and swim back. But now the firm, masterful hand of the rider was controlling his head, the calm, inflexible voice was sounding encouragingly in his ears, and after a few ineffectual attempts to turn the horse directed his gaze toward the opposite shore and did what Dr. Phil was doing—his best.

But no living thing could stem or cross that mad rush of water, and this Dr. Phil well knew. He must reach the other side, but he was not foolhardy.

The torrent was winding in its course. Dr. Phil's gaze had swept keenly from bank to bank; then he forced his horse into a current which approached the opposite shore nearly a half mile down. To the horrified spectators it looked as though they were being swept away, powerless to help themselves, as, indeed, they were for the time being. All Dr. Phil did was to guide the horse, and all the horse could do was to keep them above water. But as the current approached its nearest point to the shore, no more than ten feet distant, Dr. Phil suddenly slipped into the water, with his hand twisted in the horse's mane, and in that position, freed from his weight and with the strong right arm assisting by quick, powerful strokes, the horse threw himself forward with a desperate effort which brought his feet upon the bottom. A few minutes later they emerged from the water and staggered up the bank.

Dr. Phil did not hesitate. Lonesome valley was two miles away, and he could reach it more quickly on foot than he could on the horse in its present exhausted condition. So he turned the animal loose; perhaps he could recover him again when he returned.

He found the woman weak from loss of blood and lack of proper attention. Another hour's delay might have been fatal. He remained with her two days, until she was out of danger, and then returned to the river. Contrary to his expectation, he found the horse grazing quietly within a few rods of where he had left him, and the animal greeted him with an unmistakable whinny of pleasure and relief. Perhaps the common danger in the river and the manner of escape had won the horse's respect and dependence, possibly the animal was already becoming fond of him. Dr. Phil had not received a fee for his services, but the family's gratitude and the way the horse trotted toward him, whinnying, were enough, and he recrossed the river with buoyant heart.

In his desk he found a letter which read:

My Dear Doctor—I was a little hasty the other day, and I realized it when I saw you crossing the river. Will you overlook it by taking dinner with us Sunday?

HENRY PAULS.

Slaves of the Orient.

"In Zanzibar and Pemba slaves are very slow to take advantage of the regulations that give them the right to claim their freedom," says a traveler. "They realize that so long as they are well used their position is superior to that of the man whose freedom is his sole asset. I have found the same attitude in north Africa. From Morocco to Tripoli one sees most of the slaves well content and flourishing. The family, the locusts, the drought, and the tax collector have no terror for them. Work keeps them healthy, they have enough to eat and drink, and the future has no meaning at all. There is no promotion, there are confidential missions to governors and friends that elevate a slave, if only in the eyes of his fellows, and there is always a chance of manumission when the owner dies and wishes to have some good deeds recorded in the books of Islam's recording angels. The sorry truth of the matter is that slaves under Mohammedan rule are much better off than they ever were under the rule of white men in America and elsewhere."

The Permanent Novel.

"The novel that has inherent and permanent value that will secure for it a place in literature," said a well known author a few days ago, "rarely exceeds an edition of ten or fifteen thousand copies, and more often the limit is 5,000, while the one that is ephemeral, but catches the public fancy, may have a sale of fifty or a hundred thousand. Books of the latter class put money into the pockets of both author and publisher, but it does not come from the most discriminating readers. Of the class in question the field is limited, and while they establish the reputation and permanent value of the really literary production, they are not included in the clientele of the author who is willing to sacrifice quality and style to increase his revenues from royalties. The novel that attains a wide but brief popularity does not appeal to the literary class."

THE AMERICAN HUSBAND.

How He Appears When Viewed Through English Spectacles.

The American man is more consistently considerate of and generous to women than any fellow on earth, and in no country does he get sharper snubbing for his pains. The handling of husbands by wives in America amounts to an art, a profession, almost a science. Based on the theory that the more one has to do the more one can accomplish, ladies who have hard working, enterprising spouses simply retire from active life. If he manages his office and business satisfactorily, why not take over the house and servants? What is known as "a good husband" in the United States is a first class, nontrifling money making machine, who gives everything, asks nothing and brags ceaselessly of his wife's perfections. Should he presume to criticize a charred chop or a flat soufflé or complain at the size of the draper's bills he is set down as a brute, and the wife is pitted as a first class martyr. For such sins as the above two men of my acquaintance were forced to live in hotels a year at a time. They had committed the crime of finding fault with the impeccable sex and were reduced to subjection by having their homes taken from them. For my part, I think the Briton's way is best.—An Englishman in London Chronicle.

ORIENTAL WOMEN.

They Spend an Astonishing Amount of Time Over Their Toilets.

An eastern lady of high degree spends an amount of time over her toilet that would quite astonish the most fashionable society lady. First she has her hair dressed by her maid, who, after unloosening the long, silky black locks with a little oil made from aloe wood or coconuts, arranges it simply in a long, smooth plait, low on the nape of the neck, and decorated either with gold or jeweled ornaments.

Next the bath is prepared as hot as it can be, and in this the lady may stay as long as two or three hours. Soaps are not used, but instead there are multifarious unguents, secret preparations of the bathing women, which render the skin soft as velvet and delicately perfumed. Oftentimes the face is washed over with milk into which has been squeezed lemon juice.

The hair of the oriental woman is usually beautifully long, soft and glossy, and the way they arrange it is invariably becoming to their soft type of beauty. Perfumes are much indulged in. These are introduced in the bath and permeate the garments, but are rarely used on a handkerchief.—Philadelphia North American.

SERVANTS IN ENGLAND.

There Are Fixed Forms of Etiquette Governing Their Treatment.

While mistresses and housemaids in this country are struggling to solve the vexed "servant problem" they do not appear to take into consideration the fixed forms of etiquette governing the treatment of servants in England, which probably do much toward promoting mutual understanding between the servants and the served over there.

A housekeeper, a lady's maid and a head nurse belong to the hierarchy of a household. A lady's maid wears no cap and when in attendance on her lady is expected to be well but quietly dressed in black or some sober coloring. Her wages are from $150 to $200 a year, with the reversion of her employer's wardrobe. An English maid is always called by surname, "Smith" or "Jones," but a foreign maid's first name is used, "Marie" or "Francoise."

A lady speaking of her maid to other upper servants, such as the butler or the housekeeper, would style her "Smith" or "Marie," but when mentioning her to housemaids or footmen she would be careful to allude to her as "Miss Smith" or "Miss Marie."

The German Professor.

"With the passing of the old type of German professor—formerly the butt of the comic papers, he of the shabby clothes and absent air—has gone much of the old student life of Munich," writes N. Hudson Moore. "The modern professor is dressed in the mode. He commands a large salary which, with his fees for lectures, often exceeds that of the German secretary of state. He enjoys his advantages, good clothes, good food, the opera, athletics, and, according to a critic of his own nationality, 'his aspirations are often distinctly commercial.' Many German professors earn from 50,000 to 200,000 marks (4 marks to the dollar) a year, so the period of a pipe and garret is quite past."

Mr. Finnegan's "Philosophy."

Wanet they wuz a man an' named Doran—or was it Clancy?—lived close by a fri'nd av mine an' had a fur-nace that wudden't git fairly started innit day until along toords night jushit whin ut wuz toime t' bank ut up fer the night. Most Unfortunate.

Mother (who wants to be very nice to bachelor uncle, understood to have made his pile in Australia)—Now Charlie, you've never seen uncle before. Go and shake hands. Charlie—Oh, yes, mother, I have seen him before. I'm sure—at last year's pantomime!—Punch.

The Uplifting of The Immigrant.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in an address before the American Tract Society of Washington chose for his theme the "Uplifting of Immigrants." The President said in part:

"The United States Government does endeavor to do its duty by the immigrants who come to its shores, but unless people have some experience with the dangers and difficulties surrounding the newly arrived immigrant they can hardly realize how great they are. He is exposed to innumerable temptations, innumerable petty oppressions on almost every hand; and unless some one is on hand to help him he literally has no idea where to turn.

"No greater work can be done by a philanthropic or religious society than to stretch out the helping hand to the men and women who come to this country to become citizens and parents of citizens, and therefore, to do their part in working for the future of our land. If we do not take care of them; if we do not try to uplift them, then, as sure as fate, our children will pay the penalty. If we do not see that the immigrant and the children of the immigrant are raised up most assuredly our own children, and our children's children are pulled down. Either they will rise or we shall sink. The level of well being in this country will be a level for all of us."

He then went on to say that the immigrant should be self supporting and that spiritual as well as material well-being should be cared for. He further stated that it was his belief that men were judged by the quality of their spirit and that the superficiality of development along other lines was realized.

President Roosevelt in discussing this matter of immigration has taken up one of the serious problems of the nation. He handles it wisely and takes the situation as it exists. He does not advocate new measures or discuss the limitations which should be put upon immigration. He desires to handle affairs as they are.

He is cognizant of the fact that immigrants are pouring in from every direction and he realizes unless these individuals are brought up to the standard the nation will suffer. Everything depends on the national unit.

To uplift the immigrant is a mighty problem. In the first place most of them who come to the American shores are almost destitute. Their material well-being is first to be considered for unless they are able to eke out an existence here they will resort to crime and fall prey to evil. Many come here with the impression that there is plenty for all and that there is scarcely a struggle for existence here. Coming from oppressed countries where anarchy has been fostered in their hearts many will imagine that the United States is no less the oppressor than their mother country and will form a dangerous component of the nation. To forestall this possibility or the possibility of the immigrant becoming criminal is a hard matter but should begin with the providing of material possibilities for those that come here.

The spiritual side should be already developed and probably has been, more or less, in the immigrant. It can be kept alive here if the individual does not become hardened or skeptical through adversity.

We have great advantages to offer strangers in this land and the country will prosper as we maintain these advantages and the problem of immigration does not become an elephant on our hands.

It would seem that a more rigid restriction would make us do better by those who would come in smaller numbers.

Does it Pay to be Natural.

WHETHER or not it pays to be natural is the question in the minds of many. To be natural in this artificial age one has to be daring. It might not be good for us all if our fellows were all natural for oftentimes we prefer delusion to naked truth. People like to be fooled and it is generally the fellow that is not what he seems who wins out in this race through life.

The girl who has artificial hair and complexion and gives the impression that she is a beauty will always make a winning quicker than the girl who scorns paint and powder just to be natural.

The business man who can assume a confidential air, or a spirit of seeming good fellowship will run his plain, outspoken adversary out of town every time. Most people have two sides to them so to speak—one for the world which is moulded to public opinion and one for themselves which is suited to themselves and must be tolerated by those about them. Education and civilization have fostered artifice in this age and an artifice such as policy is a good thing for one to cultivate. As a general rule the natural qualities, good or bad, come out sooner or later in spite of all attempts at concealment, so really no artificial veneer will long shield the unworthy. The artificial people of the world are like artificial flowers, they lack soul as the waxen flower lacks fragrance. They sometimes attract, but it is not lasting.

The movement which has resulted from the meeting of the prominent committee of citizens at Santa Rosa last week to promote Sonoma County's interests at the Portland Fair is widespread and is attracting much interest. All realize the good that will accrue by giving ourselves proper representation at this exposition.

The Stockton Record in discussing "The Newspaper" hits the nail on the head when it says the newspaper is expected to put red paint on everybody's hobby and tickle the short ribs of every ambitious citizen.

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free.

Evening Post and Index Tribune $7 per year.
Daily Examiner and Index-Tribune $9 per year.
Lumber of all kinds at Camm & Hedges, Petaluma.
Hunting notices printed at this office. The very latest form.

Take the Index Tribune for the local news of the Sonoma Valley. Camm & Hedges, Petaluma, sell all kinds of lumber, laths, mouldings and mill work.

The Daily Evening Post and Sonoma Index-Tribune for one year for both papers, only $7.

Cam MacQuiddy won the fifty-yard dash at the High School Field Day at Santa Rosa Saturday.

Now is the time to clean your flues for 50c. Address: Frank Jeffers, box 28, Sonoma.

Daily Evening Bulletin, Sunday morning Bulletin and Index-Tribune all for a year for $7.80.

We are in receipt of Government seed from Senator Perkins and Congressman Livernash. Call at this office and get some.

Steel and brown colorings are very fashionable this spring. I have them in great variety from $12.00 up. H. F. Lord, Castax building, Sonoma.

Gray Weaps repairs bicycles, sewing machines and all kinds of machinery. First-class mechanic. Prices reasonable, and work attended to promptly. Leave orders at Chapman's store.

Several friends and school mates of the late Hubert Fowler sat up with the remains at the morgue Thursday night. Joe Toroni got a number of the boys together out of respect to the deceased.

The Chimney Sweep of Santa Rosa, Frank Jeffers, will be here on March 20th to sweep chimneys at 50c per flue. Residence windows washed at $1.25 per dozen. Stoves blacked and cleaned out 50c and upward. Drop postal card to 350 Second street, Santa Rosa, or address box 28, Sonoma.

There is no better place to stop in San Francisco than at the Langham Hotel, corner Ellis and Mason streets. It is six stories high, fireproof, convenient to all attractions, close to all car lines, and offers all the advantages of superior hotel service at small cost. The rooms are large, clean and well ventilated and the management courteous, polite and hospitable. Write for booklet and rates.

If your flues burn out you are in a more dangerous position than before, because cinders form by burning. New soot gathers in these and the next fire dries out the mortar between the bricks, which crumbles out and then you have a defective flue, which is very dangerous. Avoid all danger by hiring Jeffers of Santa Rosa to scrape them out with steel scrapers. Address orders by March 20th box 28, Sonoma.

Peculiar To Itself

In what it is and what it does—containing the best blood-purifying, alterative and tonic substances and effecting the most radical and permanent cures of all humors and all eruptions, relieving weak, tired, languid feelings, and building up the whole system—is true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. No other medicine acts like it; no other medicine has done so much real, substantial good; no other medicine has restored health and strength at so little cost.

"I was troubled with scurfia and came near losing my eyesight. For four months I could not see to do anything. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could see to walk, and when I had taken eight bottles I could see as well as ever." Sister A. HARRIS, Wilkes, N. C.
Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

HUBERT FOWLER

COMMITTS SUICIDE

Shoots Himself Through The Head at a Party— Jealousy The Cause.

Hubert Fowler, the nineteen year-old-son of Wm. Fowler and a popular young fellow around town, committed suicide Wednesday night by shooting himself through the head. Jealousy over a girl named Myrtle Olsen is believed to have been the cause of his rash act.

Young Fowler attended a party given by the Norrbom Brothers at their bachelor home on Broadway and seemed in the best of spirits. He became angry and sullen, however, at the attention being paid to the girl he was in love with and startled the crowd by announcing that he would only live five minutes longer.

With that he drew a pistol from his pocket and placing it to his head fired. Death was almost instantaneous.

Young Fowler was steady in his habits and bore a good reputation. Besides his father, he leaves a sister, Miss Bessie Fowler of San Francisco, and a brother, Willie Fowler of El Verano.

The funeral will be held this morning at ten o'clock from the parlors of the City Hotel.

A Well-known Sonoma Visitor's Experience at Sea

Jules Berge of the San Francisco wholesale liquor firm of Berge & Dominici and a well known visitor to this valley, had a thrilling experience while out on a pleasure trip at sea on Sunday last. Mr. Berge with a party of friends left San Francisco on the fishing tug Henrietta. A terrific storm caused the pleasure seekers to fight for their lives but after much hardship they managed to make a landing at Drake's Bay returning to their city homes on Monday.

Rumor has it that two shooting galleries, a bootblack stand and a peanut roost are on their way to El Verano. There will be something doing when the shooting galleries arrive, especially if good looking girls attend to them. The bootblack stand will enable us to take a shine and the peanuts will be just the thing to treat the summer faeries on.

Jack Kearney, while helping to unload a carload of horses which arrived at this place Saturday, was injured by a very painful accident. Mr. Kearney slipped from the car and fell with much force to the ground. His arm was badly sprained and his face bruised. For over an hour he lay unconscious but at latest reports he was getting along nicely. If Mr. Kearney had landed upon the railing of the corral in his fall the accident might have proven much more serious.

SEND BOOKLETS

TO THE FAIR

Sonoma Valley Must be Advertised at Portland— Her Advantages Entitled Her to Individual Representation.

Sonoma Valley must be advertised at the Portland Fair and her advantages entitle her to individual representation. In order to accomplish this the "Index-Tribune" wants the co-operation of every man, woman and child interested in the welfare of Sonoma Valley. In order to raise enough money to get out booklets, descriptive and illustrative of our resources we herewith head a subscription list for that purpose with $30.00.

Everybody is urged to contribute what they can for this purpose. Subscriptions will be received at this office or by representatives of this paper and the names of contributors will appear every week in our columns.

We believe that everybody realizes what advertising has done for other sections and what it can do for Sonoma. Let us make ourselves known to the outside world.

At the Portland Fair thousands of people will seek to learn about California and her garden spots.

The valley is building up at the present time and our rise must be promoted. It is just at that point where it may fall back or be pushed ahead. Let us push it ahead and leave no stone unturned to do our part toward creating permanent prosperity.

The most effective way of doing good for this valley is to preserve our individuality and get out booklets to place in the hands of the thousands of tourists who will visit the Lewis Clark Exposition.

We want the co-operation of every one in the valley and with the proper support we will be enabled to get out something handsome and unique in the way of a booklet illustrating and describing our advantages.

If you desire to get in line with up-to-date towns and cities of the State put your name down on the list.

This subscription list has nothing whatever to do with any other list which may be circulated. Money raised this way will go to advertise Sonoma Valley alone and not in conjunction with other towns in the county.

New Use of the Subjunctive

By CATHERINE BURGESS
Copyright, 1904, by Catherine Burgess

Margaret White was tired of commuting, tired of the daily ride on the elevated road from Christopher street to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, very tired of the crowded class room at the end of it, so it is not strange that her mind, idle through idleness and strenuous through habit, picked out the broad shouldered young man who strode into the car at Forty-second and of again at One Hundred and Sixteenth street regularly as the morning came as a pleasant enough plaything.

Not that he was particularly good looking. He was distinguished only by a general purposefulness, eyes that looked neither to the right nor to the left, but buried themselves in the morning paper; a general air of being alone and liking it, which appealed to her state of being alone and not liking it.

Lately, instead of the newspaper, he had each morning drawn a book from his pocket and immediately "became absorbed in it. It was not altogether a pleasant book, to judge from his face, which betrayed at times great irritation of spirit. Its covers were protected by a paper slip, calculated to balk the curiosity of whomsoever it might not concern. Margaret undoubtedly fell within this category, but that did not occur to her. An intentional device to arouse her curiosity could not have succeeded better.

One morning it chanced that the side of the car he always took was occupied by Italian laborers, dirty and malodorous. With hardly a glance at them and none at her, the man dropped into the seat at Margaret's side and produced his book. Alas! A side glance at it revealed only a Spanish grammar! Margaret could not have told what she had expected, but the unromantic fact suddenly left the whole affair down to the level of every day. The world again seemed cut out of one dingy piece, and all its uses flat, stale and unprofitable.

"And Cuba and your position and the rest of it?" she gasped.
"True as gospel," he answered. "Cuba is simply holding its breath till it can get our plans. My 'position' is that of junior partner in the firm, and I am really going there—on my wedding trip, unless you would rather go somewhere else." Then pleadingly, "You wouldn't, would you?"

And Margaret surprised herself by whispering, "No." Afterward she reflected it was what she had meant to say all along.

Beef Tea.
This story was told by an old physician who had practiced for nearly fifty years in a small country town. One day he was summoned to a farmhouse, where he found a woman in a high fever and evidently exceedingly ill. He said to her husband, who was the only other person in the house:

"Your wife is very sick and must have nothing to eat except milk and beef tea, but I want you to give her a cup of one or the other every two hours." When he came the next morning and asked about his patient her husband said:

"That beef tea don't agree with her, doctor; it certainly don't. She began to feel bad as soon as she took it."
"That's odd," said the doctor. "You didn't give her any little bits of the meat in it, did you?"

"No, sir; I strained it first on account of the grounds."
"Grounds!" roared the doctor. "What did you make that beef tea out of?"
"Corn beef and the best green tea. I boiled 'em together all yesterday afternoon to get the strength out. But it don't agree with her, doctor; it certainly don't."

Your Watch is a Compass.
"Most men who own a good watch," said a jeweler, "think they know all about it. They have the number fixed in their memory in case it is stolen. They could probably pick it out from fifty other watches with their eyes shut. But how many men know that their watch is a compass and will tell them the time of day? Strange, the explorer, I hope never to be without it. I have a watch that I had known of it in my husband's lifetime." 2d. Sold by L. S. Simmons, prescription druggist, Sonoma, Cal.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.
"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shiel, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overworked, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I think this remedy that I won my seat in the council." This remedy is for sale by Shoults & Co.

MUSIC AS A LURE.

The Way the Deadly Cobra is Captured in India.

The death dealing cobra is passionately fond of music, and it is through this means that its capture is often accomplished. The men in India who can effect the capture of this deadly reptile must be possessed of remarkable skill or their lives are forfeit. When a cobra takes up its abode in the neighborhood of a dwelling house it is customary to send for the professional snake chasers. One of them strikes up a tune near the place where the snake is supposed to be located. No matter what the creature may be doing, it is at once attracted by the sound of music. It emerges slowly from its hiding place and strikes an attitude in front of the performer. There it is kept engaged with the music while the other man creeps up behind with a handful of dust. At a convenient moment, when the cobra is standing motionless, this man suddenly throws the dust over the head and eyes of the snake. Immediately the cobra falls its length upon the ground and remains there for one short second, but the second is enough. With a movement like lightning the man seizes the body of the prostrate serpent just below the head. In great anger the cobra winds itself round and round the arm of its captor, but to no purpose, for it cannot turn its head and bite. If the fangs are to be extracted at once the captor presses his thumb on the throat of the cobra and thus compels it to open its mouth. The fangs are then drawn with a pair of pinkeys. If, however, he wishes to keep the snake intact for the present the musician comes to help him and forcibly unwinds the coils and places the body in a basket, all but the head, which is firmly held by the other man. He presses down the lid to prevent the cobra from escaping, and suddenly the captor thrusts the head in and bangs the lid.

A very expert performer can capture the snake single handed, though it is highly dangerous. While playing with one hand he throws the dust sideways with the other and captures the snake with the same hand. The whole action must be like a flash of lightning, for a half second's delay or the mere dithering in throwing the dust or catching the snake would prove fatal to the operator.
